Robert Forloney has worked in the museum field for almost twenty years as an educator, administrator and consultant, and has created accessibility programs for a variety of institutions in New York and Maryland. With educators at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art, he coordinated a group called the Museum Access Consortium, made up of museum professionals and representatives of the disability community that act as advocates for increased awareness of visitors' needs and seek to improve accessibility in museums both in terms of the physical environment as well as programming.
